Abstract

It is important to carry out security and maintenance activities for state property so that the operational activities of government units can be carried out according to their duties and functions. This study aims to review the security and maintenance of prisoners' vehicles at the Wonosobo District Attorney's Office. The research method uses qualitative methods by studying legal sources, journals, scientific works and field studies at the Wonosobo District Attorney's office as the object of research. Data obtained through interviews and observations on objects. In general, the activities of securing vehicles for the Wonosobo District Prosecutor's Office have complied with the applicable provisions: (1) legal security, (2) physical security, and (3) administrative security. Maintenance activities have also been carried out in accordance with the provisions of: (1) light maintenance, (2) moderate maintenance, and (3) heavy maintenance. However, the recording and archiving activities related to maintenance activities have not been carried out optimally. The obstacle experienced by the Wonosobo District Attorney's Office in carrying out security and maintenance of state property in the office environment is that there is no specific guideline that regulates it (so far it is guided by the rules that apply at the Ministry of Finance).
